THE CIRCULAR STAIRCASE

The paper was the one he had found among Arnold Armstrong's effects, and I recall it again:

—by altering the plans for rooms, may be possible. The best way, in my opinion, would be to—plan for—in one of the—rooms—chambers.

"I think I understand," I said slowly. "Some one is searching for the secret room, and the invaders—"

"And the holes in the plaster—"

"Have been in the progress of his—"

"Or her—investigations."

"Her?" I asked.

"Miss Innes," the detective said, getting up, "I believe that somewhere in the walls of this house is hidden some of the money, at least, from the Traders' bank. I believe, just as surely, that young Walker brought home from California the knowledge of something of the sort, and, falling in his effort to reinstall Mrs. Armstrong and her daughter here, he or a confederate, has tried to break into the house. On two occasions I think he succeeded."

"On three, at least," I corrected. And then I told him about the night before. "I have been thinking hard," I concluded, "and I do not believe the man at the head of the circular staircase was Dr. Walker. I don't think he could have got in, and the voice was not his."

Mr. Jamieson got up and paced the floor, his hands behind him.

"There is something else that puzzles me," he said, stepping before me. "Who and what is the woman Nina Carrington? If it was she who came here as Mattie Bliss, what did she tell Halsey that sent him racing to Dr. Walker's, and then to Miss Armstrong? If we could find that woman we would have the whole thing."

"Mr. Jamieson, did you ever think of that Paul Armstrong might not have died a natural death?"

"That is the thing we are going to try to find out," he replied. And then Gertrude came in, announcing a man below to see Mr. Jamieson.

"I want you present at this interview, Miss Innes," he said. May Riggs came up? He has left Dr. Walker and he has something he wants to tell us."

Riggs came into the room diffidently, but Mr. Jamieson put him at his trust me. There was nothing friendly in the glance he turned on me.

"Yes, yes. You will be protected. But, first of all, did you bring what you promised?"

Riggs produced a roll of papers from under his coat, and handed them over. Mr. Jamieson examined them with lively satisfaction, and passed them to me. "The blue-prints of Sunnyside," he said. "What did I tell you? Now, Riggs, we are ready."

"I'd never have come to you, Mr. Jamieson," he began, "if it hadn't been for Miss Armstrong. When Mr. Innes was spirited away, like, and Miss Louise got sick because of it, I thought things had gone far enough. I'd done some things for the doctor before that wouldn't just bear looking into, but I turned a bit squeamish."

"Did you help with that?" I asked, leaning forward.

"No, ma'am. I didn't even know of it until the next day, when it came out in the Casanova Weekly Ledger. But I know who did it, all right. I'd better start at the beginning."

RESPONSIBILITY IN TELEGRAPHING

Company Responsible for Messages Taken Over Telephone.

San Antonio, Tex., Jan. 14.—An interesting opinion was handed down by the fourth court of civil appeals in the case of C. H. Gore, appellant, vs. the Western Union Telegraph company, appellee, from El Paso county.

According to the opinion, if a telegraph company accepts a message over the telephone for transmission by wire to another point, it cannot claim exemption from liability for error by reason of the conditions printed on the back of a telegraph blank. The court holds that the agent in the office taking the message over the telephone acts as agent for the company and not for the sender, as in the case of a message tendered already written out on a blank and sent to the office by a messenger boy.

The decision holds that the company is not obliged to accept messages over the telephone, but that if it does, it is just as much responsible as if they were sent to the office by a messenger boy.

The case grew out of an error made over the telephone in giving the message. On March 8, 1908, Mrs. Ada Johnson, sister of C. H. Gore, telephoned a message to the Western Union office at Austin. The message read: "Mrs. C. H. Gore, Chihuahua shops, Chihuahua, Mexico: Your mother dead. Wire if you can come immediately. Lula." Testimony showed that the company had sent the message to Chihuahua "street" instead of "shops."

The jury in the trial court returned a verdict for the defendant under instructions from the judge.

The appellate court reversed the decision of the lower court and remanded the case for another trial.

BILLIONS SPENT IN TUBERCULOSIS CRUSADE.

New York Uses the Biggest Sum—Survey of Year's Work Gives Interesting Figures.

New York, Jan. 14.—Based on reports gathered from all parts of the United States, the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis issues a bulletin in which it is stated that $3,180,621.50 was expended during the year just closed by the various interests fighting consumption in the United States. The bulletin, which is preliminary to a longer report, shows that in the year 1909 over 10,000,000 pieces of literature were distributed, and that 117,312 patients were treated and assisted by the sanatoria, dispensaries and antituberculosis associations.

By far the largest amount of money spent during the past year was for the treatment of tuberculosis patients in sanatoria and hospitals, $5,282,289.77 being expended in this way. The antituberculosis associations spent $975,889.56, the tuberculosis dispensaries and clinics $540,474.64, and the various municipalities, for special tuberculosis work, spent $1,111,967.53.

New York state leads in the antituberculosis work done during the past year, having spent more money, distributed more literature and treated more patients than any other state. Pennsylvania comes next and Massachusetts is third. The next seven states are Illinois, Maryland, New Jersey, California, Colorado, Connecticut and Ohio. The following table shows the work done in these ten states:

State	Expenditures	Patients treated
New York	$1,669,179.76	41,779
Pennsylvania	1,515,664.02	24,410
Massachusetts	1,069,123.53	18,645
Illinois	295,820.53	4,826
Maryland	195,691.97	5,829
Ohio	245,502.17	3,197
New Jersey	211,660.62	2,159
Colorado	566,205.17	2,229
California	254,707.14	1,909
Connecticut	228,190.98	1,141
